Mr. Peter Lam
IDDSI International Chairperson & CEO of IDDSI Global Registered Dietitian & Credentialled Food Service Executive

Keynote Speech: Aim for the moon and reach the stars - from dream to reality

Peter Lam is the International Dysphagia Diet Standardisation Initiative (IDDSI) Chairperson and CEO. He is a leading expert in dysphagia nutrition and the development of evidence-based guidelines. Under his leadership, IDDSI has been instrumental in establishing the first set of standardized dysphagia diets worldwide. He has also contributed to the development of the Canadian Dysphagia Diet Terminology Standardization Project, which aims to improve the communication and understanding of dysphagia diets.

Peter Lam is a registered dietitian and has extensive experience in the field of dysphagia nutrition. He has contributed to the development of numerous guidelines and resources for both healthcare professionals and patients. He is known for his dedication to improving the quality of life for people with dysphagia through evidence-based nutrition interventions.

Peter Lam's work has been recognized with numerous awards and honors, including being named a “Superstar” by the Canadian Society of Nutritionists. He has also been invited to speak at numerous conferences and events around the world, sharing his knowledge and expertise with a global audience.

Prior to IDDSI, Peter was the national leader of the Dysphagia Diet Terminology Standardization Project in Canada. It was his involvement with the Canadian project that led him to collaborate with Dr. Julie Cichero from Australia and Caroline Lecky from the United Kingdom and thus the idea of IDDSI was born. Peter was the President of the Canadian Association of Foodservice Professionals, Chairperson of the Dieticians of Canada's Dysphagia Assessment and Treatment Network and he also served as Chairperson for the College of Dietitians of British Columbia.

Peter is a Registered Dietitian, Professional Practice Consultant and a Credentialled Foodservice Executive in Vancouver, BC, Canada. He is proud to work in the 2nd largest Health Authority in Canada. For his clinical work, he provides nutrition and dysphagia consultation to persons with development and learning disabilities. In his professional practice consultant capacity, he facilitated the development of the foundational interprofessional mentoring program for health professionals so that experienced clinicians can share knowledge, wisdom and prepare novice clinicians for practice.

Peter received his nutrition and dietetics Bachelor of Science Undergraduate Training at the University of British Columbia and completed a post graduate internship at the Vancouver Island Health Authority to become a Registered Dietitian. Many years later, he has been appointed as a subject matter expert clinical instructor at the University of British Columbia where he helps to train future dietitians about the interprofessional and transdisciplinary approach to dysphagia and nutrition support. He feels incredibly privileged to have the opportunity to help shape young minds and excite critical thinking.

Peter loves food! He loves to eat. He loves to cook. He loves to talk about food and learn about food. When traveling around the world, he would rather savour local and cultural food and drinks rather than visit tourist attractions. His passion is to help everyone enjoy the food and drinks they love. This is what continues to motivate him to volunteer his time and lead the global and regional teams of IDDSI.

Peter is also a registered dietitian and has extensive experience in the field of dysphagia nutrition. He has contributed to the development of numerous guidelines and resources for both healthcare professionals and patients.
